Lantian Xie

June 16 - 19, 2016

We are pleased to announce our second participation at Art Basel Statements with Dubai based artist Lantian Xie.

2020 - 2046 is a series of images, objects, and sounds by Lantian Xie.

Titled after two years—1, Dubai's upcoming World Expo and 2, Wong Kar Wai's science fiction film about near-future Hong Kong—each work here tells the story of some place or event; a city-scaled resort, the afterlives of a bygone landmark, a meal never finished, personal effects lost or stolen or compulsively accumulated.

In these works, locales are withheld or not quite knowable. Clues are given but left unresolved. In Metropolitan Hotel, colour pencil drawings depict a number of hotels that share the same name, staged as a repeated effort to arrive, or locate. In Yan Can Cook, the percussive sounds of celebrity chef Martin Yan's famously speedy knife-work are looped on vinyl record, syncopated to the sound of a carousel slide projector, depicting an image of his hands at work.

Elsewhere, in Future World, film clips looping endlessly depict gawking tourists newly arrived at a luxury resort, in which multiple environs reproduce moments in history, and the future, echoing projects like Shenzhen's Window of the World and Global Village in the artist's native city of Dubai.

Lastly, a series of sculptures allude to a patchwork of minor obsessions. They include: a cup of chai on a hot-plate, a collection of Massage Centre calling cards, a collection of Bamboo No. 1 mahjong tiles, a couple of fake Rolex watches, and a recording of the answering machine from a fast food home-delivery Call Centre.

About Lantian Xie
